

The objective of this paper is to perform a comparative study between the application of the new version of Eurocode 3 and the European Standard EN 50341-1 to analyse steel lattice structure for supporting overhead electrical lines