

market feasibility study is an analysis conducted to assess the viability of a new product, service, or business idea in a specific market. The study aims to identify potential customers, their needs, preferences, market trends, competition, and regulatory issues