| Introduction Oedipes, aware that there is a curse on Thebes, sends | the Apollo, the god of prophecy |
|--|---------------------------------|
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |
|  |                                 |