Working in the public sector offers several benefits. For example, it provides job stability by making it less likely for you to lose your position. On the other hand, having your own business has its own challenges. For instance, starting a business often requires a lot of money, and there's always the risk of losing it.