

The epidemic of substance abuse continues to pose a significant challenge to all nations. Although there is a tendency to simply associate drug abuse with poverty, the problem affects every social stratum, gender, and race; and pregnant women are no exception. These include cocaine, marijuana, heroin, and psychotherapeutic drugs that were not prescribed by a health care professional.