

For example, using alloys with elements that have a lower reactivity with the reinforcement can minimize the formation of brittle interfacial layers