

Hypocaust Energy Efficiency In De architectura, Vitruvius gives explicit instructions on how to design buildings which use hypocausts so that fuel efficiency is maximized. For example, at the public baths, placing placing the hot room next to the heat source, then the warm room, followed by the cold room. He .also advises on using a type of regulator to control the heat in the hot rooms