Despite lingering perceptions, 37.0?C (98.6?F) is rooted in a historical convention that modern data argue should not continue to be regarded as normal average body temperature.Sensitivity for the detection of illness may be inappropriately lowered if 38.0?C and 38.3?C continue to be the standards.

lakhasly.com © تم تلخيص النص بواسطة موقع لخصلي