

Management is based on a set of fundamental principles that guide decision-making and behavior within organizations. These principles are applied through an integrated management process that begins with goal setting, followed by planning how to achieve those goals, organizing resources and tasks, recruiting and selecting the right personnel, leading and motivating teams, and finally controlling to ensure everything is proceeding according to plan.