

A Computer network is two or more computer systems that are linked by a transmission medium and share one or more protocols that enable them to exchange data