

Each of the two rings is formed by an assembly of eight radial arms which project into the central orifice, thus delimiting eight lateral channels. The nuclear pore The nuclear pores have a diameter close to 100 nm; there are 3000 to 4000 per typical mammalian cell nucleus. (fig. 1/3 and 1/4)