A nested if statement is a way of making decisions in programming that involves having one "if" statement inside another. It's like making a decision within a decision.