

Verbal irony occurs when a person says something but means the opposite of what they actually state. It can be humorous because the true meaning is often the reverse of what is said, creating a contrast that the audience or other characters may recognize