

The strong centralized authority decides what kinds of goods and services will be produced based on the priorities of the country and the resources that are available