

I can imagine your heart is facing an unenviable struggle, and that it is not easy to choose between a mother who raised you with all love and tenderness and one who gave you life. The thing is, none of them stands in the other's place inside your heart, since each of them is a piece of you; each has some undeniable merit that cannot be refused. But remember, my soul, love is not a choice between two persons; it is a bridge connecting them. Whatever your decision will be, here I am with you
