

the last solution is cell cultures, scientists have been able to build human cells into 3-D structures, known as 'organoids' which are able to display and mimic the same functions as human body parts