

Abstract Automatic controls play an ever-increasing role in a human way of life. A circuit with LM35DZ temperature sensor, PIC16F877A microcontroller, brush less DC motor and few of electronic components is designed and implemented to control the fan speed automatically. Automatic control is vast technological area whose central aim is to develop control strategies that improve performance when they applied to a system. One such gadget is the fan