

Researchers use coefficients, standard errors, T-statistics, and probabilities to analyze the relationship between stock prices and other variables. The lowest p-value is 3.2%, while the largest is 97% for GDP growth.