

Electronic retailing industry requires companies to adapt their business models to capture internet sales, which can involve building out distribution channels such as warehouses, internet websites, and distribution centers