There was a fox that lived in the forest.The others said, "That is typical behavior for Fox. He does mean things all the time. Sometimes, he is completely immoral. We all disapprove of his actions, so we should teach him a lesson. Tomorrow, we'll push Fox into that pit."He yelled, "Eagle, please help me! If I don't get out of here, I will perish!"Eagle said, "You may think your tricks are trivial, but you hurt others when you do mean things. I'll help you if you promise to be nice."He moaned and began to weep.At last, he saw Eagle watching him from her roost.One day, he used the sharp rim of a bottle to dig a pit in the ground.The angry Rabbit climbed out and told the other animals what happened.Fox was oblivious to the hidden animals.Just then, the other animals ran up to Fox and pushed him in. All the animals laughed and cheered, except Fox, of course.Fox couldn't get out!The walls of the pit were covered in damp ivy.It was too slippery for him to climb out.He was utterly helpless.Fox loved to play mean tricks on the other animals.He hid in a tree until Rabbit came to the pit's edge.Then, he jumped out and pushed Rabbit into the pit.Fox laughed and ran away.The next day, all of the animals hid near the pit and waited for Fox.He walked up to the pit to see if Rabbit was still trapped.