

The Person I Admire When I first met Hamza Haj Qaddour at university, I immediately noticed his calm confidence and respectful nature. What stood out the most was his dedication not just to his personal success, but to making a meaningful contribution to society. Hamza was an exceptional student, always excelling in his studies. He constantly pushed himself to improve, showing bravery and resilience in the face of challenges. His confidence, kindness, and determination continue to inspire me