Several factors, including lighting conditions, expectations, and surrounding colors, significantly impact our perception of colors.Different lighting conditions, such as natural daylight or artificial light, can alter the way colors appear to us. The second factor is expectations.Lastly, surrounding colors also play a role.The first is lighting.