

One of the most important aspects of our bodies is that they generate heat through the process of metabolism. When we sweat, this cools us down, providing a cooling effect without any other effort on our part. One of the most important aspects of our bodies is that they generate heat through the process of metabolism. When we sweat, this cools us down, providing a cooling effect without any other effort on our part.