

Introduction: Nutritional intervention is effective in improving glycemic control in patients with type 2 diabetes but requires large inputs of manpower. The aim of this study is to test the hypothesis that AI-supported nutritional intervention is as efficacious as the in-person, face-to-face method in terms of improving glycemic control in patients with type 2 diabetes