

The most common antimicrobial resistance mechanisms in such microorganisms include the acquisition of mobile genetic elements(MGEs) from other Enterobacterales and the overexpression of efflux pumps, The predominant cause of resistance to B-lactams is the production of B-lactamases, which inactivate .the drug by hydrolyzing the B-lactam ring