

People are individuals who belong to the human species, Homo sapiens. They have developed complex languages, created intricate social structures, and built civilizations throughout history