

With expansion, you enter something and it is expanded into something else before the shell acts upon + it. To demonstrate what we mean by this, let's take a look at the echo command. The process that makes this happen is called expansion.