

Nine students graduated from the prosthodontist Master's program, divided into three batches. The research publications of these graduates were evaluated. In the first batch, two out of three students published research papers. All three students in the second batch published research, with one publishing multiple papers. The third batch saw only one student publish, while the others did not. Overall, most students demonstrated strong research contributions during their studies, while a few did not meet expectations.