

This poem is, at least in part, about the difficulties of old age. It is immortal and the spring of vitality and youth. Human body has been compared to a tattered and torn coat. It is never ageing