

Friendships are an essential part of life, they bring happiness and companionship. Interestingly, although their qualities and characteristics may differ, there are special traits that Raghad and Raneem share. By examining their individual characteristics and the overlap between them, we can see how they fit together just like pieces of a puzzle. There is no doubt that Raghad and Raneem vary greatly in their personalities. This difference in their looks brings race into their friendship, ensuring that they are able to explore the different flaws of their personalities and their trades. Sometimes, friends differ in their personalities and interests, but these differences often allow them to complement the group. Two people I know personally, friends of Raneem and Raghad, have unique qualities that make their friendship special and complementary. In terms of their qualities, Raghad is a hardworking and meticulous person. To take it to the grandfather's table and strive to achieve every task with perfection. Ability to think comprehensively outside the box and create unique solutions to complement Raghad's great attention to detail. On the other hand, Raneem is more relaxed and articulate. Raghad is open to growing in social environments.