

This paper argues that Arthur Miller in his play Death of a Salesman distorts the American Dream into a dream of material success and ignores the importance of security, unity of family and spirituality in the life of humans. Therefore, the materialism of the American society created problematically selfish and greedy capitalists.