

To read from a file in C++, you'll typically use the `<<` library, which provides classes for handling file streams. This guide categorizes and explains the common types of file reading in C