

In these types of protocols to keep the redundant data transmission level at minimum, the sensor nodes negotiate with the other nodes and share their information with the neighboring nodes about the resources available and data transmission decisions are made after the negotiation process.