In these types of protocols to keep the redundant data transmission level at minimum, the sensor nodes negotiate with the other nodes a and share their information with the neighbor– ing nodes about the resources available and data transmission decisions are made after the negotiation process.