

This paper explores the challenges and possibilities of science, technology, engineering, and mathematics education in the United Arab Emirates. A systematic literature review was therefore carried out to comprehensively synthesize research on the current stance of STEM education in the UAE, as well as the challenges faced, and projected possibilities. All rights reserved