

For my photography portfolio, I chose the theme "Trees and Nature" because I feel a strong connection to natural places. Trees, in particular, always catch my attention. They remind me of peace, time, and change. I think many people walk past trees every day without really seeing them, and I want to help others notice their beauty. My idea is to take photos of trees in different weather and lighting. For example, I want to photograph them during the morning, sunset, and maybe even when it's cloudy. I believe lighting changes how we see things, and I want to show that in my work. I also plan to use simple camera techniques like different angles, focusing on one part of the tree, or using the sunlight in a creative way. I want to take close-up shots of leaves, bark, or branches, as well as full pictures of trees in their surroundings. I'll be taking photos in local parks and natural areas near where I live. My goal is to show how trees are a quiet but powerful part of nature. I hope my portfolio makes people slow down and look more closely at the nature around them.
