refers to the long-run relative frequency of an event based on the assumptions of an infinite number of observations and of no change in the underlying conditions