

Pipe jacking is a trenchless technique that involves the installation of pipes by pushing them through the ground. Pipe jacking is ideal for installing pipes in a straight line, but it can also be used to install pipes with a slight curvature. The ram applies pressure to the pipes, pushing them through the ground as the excavated soil is removed from the launch shaft.