

The skin effect is a phenomenon that occurs in conductors when alternating current (AC) flows through them.