

Almost every culture has myths¹ about machines eventually becoming more powerful than their creators and then trying to kill them. With the right resources, AI can benefit humanity because it will allow us to do things much more efficiently and expand our knowledge and understanding.² People are interested in AI because of the potential dangers, but I don't think artificial intelligence is something to fear. They can remember vast amounts of information, and they never forget. I believe it is a very powerful tool that can improve the planet for humans.³ Machines are able to do many things that humans cannot do. Computers can calculate things much faster than any human. They can control larger and more complex machines than any one human could ever control. Nobody really knows what the future holds, and it's human nature to be afraid of the unknown. However, machines were created by people, so it's only logical that they should help people
