

Pacing is a fundamental and practical method in surveying, valued for its simplicity and accessibility. By understanding its limitations and employing techniques to enhance accuracy, surveyors can effectively utilize pacing to support their work. It offers a practical solution for quick distance estimation and preliminary measurements, complementing more precise instruments.