

Renewable energy sources are derived from natural processes that are replenished constantly. The most common sources of renewable energy are solar, wind, hydroelectric, geothermal, and biomass energy