

The Consumer Protection Act or consumer Law is a subsidiary of the common law governing private legal relations between the consumer and the business sector that sells the goods and provides services. Consumer protection covers a wide range of topics, including (not limited to) product litigation, unfair business practices, fraud, and poor product definition. It deals with financial relations, product and contract safety, regulation of payment of invoices, pricing, and refund of goods...etc. Consumer laws vary.