

A hospital blast in Gaza City killed 471 people, mostly civilians, in October. The blast was part of Israel's Operation Iron Swords, launched in response to Hamas's attack on Israeli communities surrounding the Gaza Strip. The hospital explosion triggered fury across the region, with large street protests in Arab, Iranian, and Turkish cities. Israel's military campaign has been more intense and destructive than in its previous wars with Hamas, flattening entire neighborhoods in Gaza.