

To test the integrated approach, a typical agricultural watershed in Eastern China was selected as the case study area. The watershed climate is continental monsoon, with the average annual temperature and rainfall of 13.2 °C and 790 mm, respectively. Local rivers are influenced by a seasonal hydrological regime, which generally flow from northeast to southwest. 1