

Future trends and developments ?Another concept is to connect every medical institution in a country or nation with a centralized server. One concept regarding the EHR, is a patient card equipped with a microchip, which is storing necessary patient data for following examinations or emergencies. ?To conclude, PACS have become an essential part in modern medical environments and are facing plenty of different trends in the future