

The results indicate that heavy metal contamination in river sediments is much higher compared to background soil, with significant excess concentrations of lead, cadmium, and zinc. Translated with (DeepL.com (free version