

How is G6PD deficiency treated? This involves removing some of the your baby's blood and replacing it with donor blood or plasma. You should also be careful about using any herbal and alternative medicines, as some of these may also trigger acute haemolytic anaemia. This sometimes involves a blood transfusion. Babies with jaundice are usually treated with phototherapy (light therapy).