

One of John's favorite things was a big iron pot. "I'm sorry," said the farmer's wife from her cottage door. "Food is scarce these days. I only have enough for my own family." The pot had once belonged to his mother. As much as he loved the pot, John was hungry. He decided to trade the pot for something to eat. "Thank you, anyway," John said