

Pile foundation Foundations looking forward to driven piles usually have teams of piles connected by a pile cap (a massive concrete block into that the heads of the piles are embedded) to distribute masses that are bigger than one pile will bear. Pile caps and isolated piles are typically connected with grade beams to tie the inspiration components together; lighter structural elements bear on the grade beams, whereas heavier elements bear directly on the pile cap